Hi Zhishu! Your mockup looks nice, especially the colors, images, and overall structure. To better achieve the effect I would like to see, I have some suggestions for you regarding the details on the site.

1. The navigation bar is currently floating at almost the center of the page when viewing from a computer. I know your intention is to make it stick at the top, so I think you can make the box and font smaller and closer to the top.
2. The typeface for the title “Kabuki” is the only sans serif on the whole website. Probably changing it to the same typeface as the texts and subtitles would be better. Also, pay attention to unify the subtitles’ style. That will help make a clearer and more organized look. (And make sure to remove things like “[35]” copied from Wikipedia.)
3. The image next to the main title is lovely! There’s one small change I would recommend to make which is the image in the “History” section. If you put it to the right side of the texts box like you how you put the image to the left on the previous page, there would be more consistency.

Overall, the color palette you are using is exactly what I’m looking for, and the vibrant images work well. I would like to see a more unified layout as you are progressing to the next step, so please go ahead and refine the spacing, alignment, and typeface. Nice work!
